My Military Hero

My military hero is my dad. My dad has been in many wars. My dad is in the Naval Academy's Football Hall of Fame. But, that is not why I chose him. No, I chose my dad because I love him so much.

First, when we lived in Japan while dad was on the USS KITTY HAWK, he would make video tapes for us. He made us movies of the ship, his friends, and even read a book to us. He mailed us the videos so when we watched them, we would not miss him so much.

Second, my dad makes the best breakfasts on Sunday mornings. He makes pancakes, scrambled eggs, bacon, and sometimes, waffles. If he sleeps in, he will go to McDonald's and get us a big grand slam breakfast. I have five brothers and sisters, and my dad always takes time to make sure he gets all our orders right. For instance, my brother only likes syrup on his pancakes. I like syrup and butter on my pancakes. Dad makes ~~sure~~ sure everyone gets their pancakes exactly how they want it.

Third, my dad always finds a way out of trouble. One time I forgot to bring my homework home from school and was very stressed and upset. Dad went after work with me to my school so I could get the books I needed. I was worried he would be disappointed in me for forgetting. But, dad gave me a hug and said, "No biggie. We'll just go and get it." Without Dad being there for me, I could have gotten a couple of zeroes for grades.

Finally, the number one reason my dad is my military hero is because he always makes me happy and laugh.
